Killed When Train Hits Ambulance

The crossing on the Rock Island at 147th St. Midlothian, was the scene of a tragic and fatal auto and train crash Tuesday night, about 11 p.m., when an East bound fast freight train struck an ambulance in which John W. O'Daniel, 13423 Branden Ave., Chicago was being taken from the Oak Forest Infirmary after suffering heat prostration, to the Hines Hospital in Maywood. There were quite a number of conflicting stories in regard to just how the accident occurred.

The Ambulance crew H. O. Weis and Russel Hendershaw were reported to have endeavored to push the ambulance off the track after the motor had stalled, but they were unsuccessful. They jumped just in time to save their own lives. Strangely although O'Daniel was dead no mark of violence was found on his body. The train had crushed the front of the ambulance only.

One of the electric gates and the electric crossing flasher were demolished in the crash.

ORLAND SCHOOL BOARD APPROVES 4 YEAR HIGH

At a meeting of the School Board last Monday night, the Board formally approved of the addition of the Fourth Year to the High School program, which means the 3 year students do not have to transfer to another school. However, these students should register either the 4th or the 5th of August, between the hours of 1 and 9 p.m.

The board also approved immediate purchase of new science laboratory equipment, making possible to offer not only General Science and Biology as in the past but to offer them on an individual student experimental plan, instead of merely a demonstration basis, as was necessary formerly.

This new equipment will also make possible the teaching of Physics and Chemistry on an individual experimental basis. The board further authorized the taking of bids on new furniture for a new school library, the commercial room, a combination agricultural and mechanical drawing room and equipment for a combination farm and industrial shop.

Final decision on the question on free bus transportation was temporarily deferred pending the outcome of a survey to determine the number of students interested in attending the new Community High School.

All of the teaching staff of Orland 3 year High School were elected to serve in similar capacities in the new school. In addition, Mr. John L. Betts, part time teacher in the 7th and 8th grades in Orland last year, was elected to part time position in the new High School to teach such social studies as History, Economics, and Sociology. Mr. Betts will be remembered by his friends as having received his Masters degree in June. This new contract will now make him a full time employee of Dist. 135 and 221.

The new forced air heating plant for the entire school is being rapidly installed. The roof on the new gym addition is entirely completed. The cement floor on the stage has been finished and the cement floor in the building proper is now being poured.

BIG CAR DRIVING ACE LEADS IN POINTS FOR MIDGET TITLE

Tony Bettenhausen, Tinley Park ace driver of midgets and big racing cars, is defending the lead in the point standing for the season midget auto racing title at Raceway Park, 129 St. and Ashland Ave., in competitions on Wednesday and Saturday nights. Tony is leading in points for the Three A midwest big car title.

Tony Bettenhausen will be the object of considerable attention Saturday night at Raceway Park, 129th and Ashland Avenues, where top-liners from four states will endeavor to move him out of first place in the point standing for the season title. It will be the same objective next Wednesday night when the first of the midweek programs get underway.

Tony has been dividing his time between midgets and big cars in the racing firmament this year and he has given a good account of himself in both forms of competition. He now leads in the point standing for the Three A midwest big car championship.

Among others who will try to stop the Tinley Park ace Saturday night will be Pete Romcevic, the South Chicago machinist, who up to this year held the record for one lap of the quarter mile Raceway track, Mike O'Halloran, Ted Duncan, Harry Lewis, Bert Knight, Johnny Kieweg, Pete Nielsen, Tony Willman, Gus Klingbiel, Warren Erwin, Eddie Kracek, Shorty Sorenson, Cowboy O'Rourke, Bob Muhle, Jimmy Caris, Myron Fohr and Frank Buraney.

Oat Harvest Is Now In Full Swing

The oat harvest is now at its heights. Practically all the oat crop has been cut or combined and thrashing is well under way this week. The oat yield is good as is also the quality. Due to the shortage of labor farmers have been confronted with a serious problem how to handle their crops. Quite a number of farmers have purchased combines which doing away with labor.

One man on a tractor can operate both machines. The hot nights have been very beneficial to the corn crop which is going to be a bumper crop from present indications. Many of the farmers through out this territory have come to raising hy-bred corn which in some instances now is over 5 ft. high.

This type of corn produces very heavy yields.

Old Camp Meeting Days Recalled At 75th Jubilee Service

New Lenox was reminded of the old time camp meeting days last Sunday when approximately 1,000 persons attended the 75th or Diamond Jubilee Anniversary of the opening of the camp grounds by the Methodist church in 1866.

The stately trees in the natural wooded auditorium surrounding the service platform resounded again to the old familiar hymns so often heard in by-gone days. Homer Rodcheaver renowned singer and religious hymn book publisher conducted the song service both in the afternoon and evening. Geo. Brewster of Joliet presided at the Hammond electric organ. Mr. Brewster at one time was assisted with Billy Sunday, noted evangelist, in conducting revivals throughout the country.

Dr. Chas. Drake Skinner presided at the afternoon program and offered the opening prayer. Following the song service Bishop James H. Straughn resident bishop of the Pittsburgh area delivered an interesting sermon. At the close of the afternoon service supper was served in the dining hall on the camp grounds. At 7 p. m. another meeting was held. This service was under the direction of the Rev. Richard W. Miller, executive secretary of the board of education of the Rock River Conference.

The closing service of the Diamond Jubilee took place at 8 p. m. when another song service was conducted by Mr. Rodcheaver with Mr. Brewster at the organ. The outstanding feature of this service was the Jubilee historical pageant written and directed by Marian Leucke Angus.

Those participating were attired in costumes of the days of long ago. Jubilee song books used in the afternoon and evening song services were sold by the ushers.

Two nurses from Silver Cross hospital Miss Helen Long and Miss Mary Wahl, were in the hospital cottage on the grounds during the afternoon and evening. The Joliet YMCA supplied the chairs which were used in addition to the regular camp meeting benches. Shaws Joliet Tent and Awning Co. donated the use of tents and chairs.

The Hammond Organ was furnished by Glenn Davis of Villa Park. Robert S. Kerfoot of Batavia was in charge of the sound equipment and special lighting effects, while the Rev. E. R. Aman of New Lenox served as manager of the grounds. Many of the huge trees on the grounds are 75 to 100 years old. A number of the original cottages built shortly after the grounds were opened in 1866 are still standing and are used every year. The grounds comprising 21 acres are kept up very well and improvements are made every year.

U. S. Soldier-Boys Become School-Boys To Study New Technique of Modern War

Text Book School Lessons
From European-War
Battlefields.

By LIEUT.-COL. W. H. WELLS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"What d'ya know?"
This casual, friendly American greeting has assumed tremendous significance in the army and is the essence in securing military preferment in place of "Who d'ya know?"

So important is the "what d'ya know" that in order to develop the innumerable technical and professional specialists needed in a modern fighting force, approximately 60,000 of our soldiers are in constant attendance at some 71 schools. Their studies range from brief clerical courses, to six months of practical and theoretical work for air mechanics. This school work is a full-time job with the entire day devoted to the classroom or shop. Evenings are taken up with "home work." Thousands of officers also are attending schools, but that is another story, the war department stated.

Military experts claim that the army, in being and planned, is essentially a motorized, mechanized, technical force, utilizing every gadget or contrivance ever devised by Yankee ingenuity which has military value. In proportion to that of other powers, it contains more motors and more technically trained men, both enlisted and commissioned, than any force ever organized in the world's history.

Because of the emergency, war department instructions provide for the continuous operation of army schools. As the graduates of one class receive their certificates of completion of a course, another is waiting to occupy the desks or benches of their predecessors. It is estimated that over 300,000 men will pass through these schools this year.

Technical Knowledge Vital.

"Essentially, our army is a fighting force, and its only reason for existence is national defense," General Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, declared. "A modern army trained to cope with any foe, or meet any situation must be composed principally of technical experts. Even a soldier running a caliber-30 machine gun must have a fair knowledge of mechanics; while the crews of the large 16-inch coast defense guns must have expert knowledge which includes both mechanical and electrical subjects.

"Modern pedagogical standards have been adopted by the armed forces, and the khaki-clad student finishing one of the courses is certain to have mastered his subject with consequent increased value to himself and the nation on the termination of his military service," he continued.

It is obvious that every man in the army will not attend one of these special schools. Aptitude, previous civil occupations, and the results of intelligence tests invariably will govern commanding officers in recommending soldiers to take special courses of study.

Every branch of the army is conducting schools for the development of its particular type of specialists. In the ordnance department men are trained to repair and maintain, under field service conditions, articles of equipment ranging from intricate precision fire control instruments to the rugged prime movers of heavy artillery. The finance department has special courses in accountancy and finance. The signal corps stresses communications. While the coast artillery courses of instruction emphasize electrical installations. Weather forecasting, road making, X-ray technicians, and cooking are among other courses taught.

Intensive instruction in every phase of military operation and testing of war equipment is well under way today in army schools and camps located at hundreds of points in the U. S. The personnel of the army, navy and air corps is being trained to a razor-edge of efficiency in preparation for stern times that may lie ahead. Above at top, is pictured a young soldier being initiated into the mysteries of field telephone communications. To the left at bottom, a machine-gun instructor explains the mechanism, and at right bottom, a 16-inch steel spokesman for America roars out a thunderous message, while artillery recruits look on.

When these soldiers return home, the family jolopies should be maintained in perfect running condition as a result of this training, one officer observed; while the static which interferes with Pa's radio set should be readily eliminated.

School Centers Scattered.

Army schools are scattered from coast to coast, with the air corps schools, with an enrollment of 20,265 students, leading the 13 branches of the army. This figure does not include flying cadets or commissioned officers undergoing instruction. At Scott field, over 4,000 men are learning to be radio operators and radio mechanics; while at Chanute field, over 11,000 men are taking technical courses of instruction.

Close behind the air corps in the number of soldiers attending schools is the quartermaster corps with 17,212 men being trained in practically every activity found in civil life, ranging from electricians, carpenters, painters, and plumbers to shoe repairers and welders. The quartermaster corps also has motor transport schools at Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.; Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.; and Camp Normoyle, San Antonio, Texas, where 700 men graduate each month from a three-months' course as specialists in motor mechanics.

The armed force school at Fort Knox will eventually graduate 26,000 men a year, and at present, has a student body of 4,298. The tremendous expansion of the armored force, from one division to the four now in training with four more planned in the immediate future, calls for innumerable specialists. The maintenance of motor vehicles and tanks is indeed a job for specialists.

All methods of electrical communications are stressed, and every combat branch of the army is training radio operators and radio engineers, as well as every type of wire communication operators. Army methods require that the soldier not only be able to install a telephone, but he must also be able to stretch wires, operate a switch-board, and maintain the whole system in working order.

Huddled under a bush with a heavy caliber-45 automatic pistol strapped to his side, and frequently in a driving rain, the army switch-board operator occupies a far different role than the "hello girl" we all know. When communications fail, the fog of war envelops the commander, and all too frequently, chaos results. Pigeons have not been neglected and "pigeoneers" who train these carriers are recognized with specialists ratings.

Continuous Education.

Unlike most civilians, the soldiers' education never ceases. In addition to the 60,000 men putting in full time at schools, every division and regiment in the army is conducting part time additional schools. Tactics are the principal courses taught in these troop schools, but thousands of men are devoting their afternoons to mastering the fundamentals of motors, radios, telephones and telegraph instruments.

Another tremendous factor in the promotion of Americanism which is a part of the army's educational system are schools conducted in many units for the teaching of the three R's. Chaplains conduct most of these schools and instruction is given during the soldiers' "free time."

"Every man with the colors will gain something from his service," General Marshall said in closing, "for many, it will be a trade; for others it will be an increased knowledge of human nature through the democracy of the tent; while all will be strengthened physically. The old expression, 'The army will make a man out of you' is as true today as when it was first coined."

Russian Failure to Ship Fresh Caviar Opens a Market for Ontario Fishermen

BOSTON.—Caviar, the delight of the cosmopolitan gourmet for which the lesser epicure must definitely acquire a taste, has become "black gold" to the fishermen of northern Ontario since shipments from Russia, chief source of caviar supply, have been curtailed for the duration.

With the price of caviar soaring to three dollars a pound as it is taken from the sturgeon, and one dollar per ounce by the time it reaches the consumer, the Ontario fishermen have been quick to set additional nets in the northern lakes and rivers to meet the demand.

Bearing out the adage that "It's an ill wind that blows no good," the new activity is attracting many tourists to the fisheries of the north.

The Ontario Indians, usually Ojibways, also share in the boom. When the fish is dressed they get the head—an Ojibway delicacy when cooked as we cook a pig's head—and with the increased activity of the fisheries every day is feast day.

Like the moose, another native of northern Ontario, the sturgeon is also pre-historic in appearance; a strange thing left from an age when living things were large and ugly. The sturgeon has from 11 to 13 bony plates on its back and about as many of these hard, bony armor shields on each side.

In the northern lakes sturgeon are taken in traps having nets several hundred yards long stretched across a lake or river and leading the fish into a circular net from which they are taken by the fishermen.

Thus the sturgeon fishermen of the lakes constantly hope for high winds to move the fish into their traps. Four or five fish taken in a haul, although a highly profitable catch in the present market, is considered a poor "take." When a high wind blows the catch is always better and with caviar selling for more than twice as much as fine silver (caviar $1.00 per ounce to consumer; fine silver $.42 per ounce), the large fish are well named "black gold."

Because the roe is highly perishable, and must be treated by the fishermen immediately after the sturgeon is dressed rather than shipped to market "raw," converting it into caviar is an art that is handed down from father to son and held just as much a secret as a chef's formula for a favorite sauce. The result is that some fishermen get twice as much as others for their caviar because of the manner in which they treat it. The female fish will produce about 20 pounds of roe, netting fishermen up to $3 per pound.

Krug new power czar in interests of national defense . . . 'Co-Ordination' program needed in defense program.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON. — A man worth watching for the next year is J. A. Krug, who is the really important figure so far as electric power is concerned in the Office of Production Management.

The importance of his job is only part of the reason why he will bear watching. His job virtually is to run the distribution of electricity in this country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. It will be Krug, as long as he holds his present job, who will determine whether "A" can have as much power as he wants for his plant, and possibly to get more for him—or to decide that "A" is not entitled to but half or perhaps none of what he is now using or wants to use.

In other words, Krug is by way of being the power czar of this country, in the interest of national defense.

Now comes why Krug was appointed. He was eased into his present place primarily by David E. Lilienthal, of the Tennessee Valley authority, with some assistance in the push from Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power commission.

He is now being backed in his job by those two rather astute gentlemen, not so much because they love him as because they do not want something else. The something else is Harold L. Ickes. Ickes wants to be power czar, and is reaching for control of TVA as well as all the other public power projects in the land.

Another Scrap For Lilienthal

Lilienthal is by way of having his second big scrap INSIDE the administration. His first was with Arthur E. Morgan, but Morgan was thrown out. There were plenty of fireworks, and Lilienthal did not emerge unscathed, but he won, and in winning he finally had Franklin D. Roosevelt in his corner, which would make it bad for any opponent.

This time he is by no means certain of having F.D.R. in his corner. Nobody is sure what the President would do—whom he would favor. Harold Ickes has always been strong with the President, but he has not won all of his fights which were taken to the White House for settlement by any means. His great strength at the White House has always been, however, that he seems, to F.D.R. if not to anybody else, to be such a good loser.

But Lilienthal and Olds have won the first round. They have got Lilienthal's man Krug in the key position so far as control of electricity is concerned.

Almost 'Ickes Man' At One Time

He came near being an Ickes man—once. Ickes wanted him to take charge of Bonneville, after J. D. Ross died.

"I don't want it," Krug is reported to have said.

"Well, I think the President will draft you," Ickes is reported to have said with a smile.

"Before you start anything on that," Krug is then alleged to have remarked, "you better find out how I would like to run Bonneville."

Ickes asked some questions, and found that Krug did not believe much in bureaucratic control from Washington.

Krug was not "drafted."

Defense Co-Ordination Seems Urgent Need

Sick as many of us are of the very word "co-ordination," and tired as we may be of hearing of the appointment of some new co-ordinator to do this or that, it would appear that there are a few spots where co-ordination might be applied, and situations which intelligent activity by a co-ordinator might correct. All of which, of course, is with respect to the national defense situation.

On the very serious side there is the rivalry between OPM—the Office of Production Management, headed by the famous pair of "advisers" William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman—and OPAX, headed by Leon Henderson.

OPAX believes that OPM is headed for the discard, and that OPAX will eventually take over its functions. OPM naturally regards OPAX as a perhaps necessary but certainly unpleasant evil.

Neither has any real power. That all comes from the President. Usually the President regards every problem as in the "study stage," another favorite expression of F.D.R., until it is brought to him for final decision.

That is why, of course, there has been no duplication of what Woodrow Wilson did in the last war when Bernard M. Baruch was appointed chairman of the War Industries board and given wide powers. At the time there was quite a bit of criticism of Baruch, naturally, but in retrospect, and especially in comparison, the job he did then looks pretty grand.

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

Blaise quieted Flame as a figure appeared in the path leading down from the railroad fill.

"Bo'-jo!" returned Blaise.

The half-breed's eyes roved over the heaped bags; then he turned to Brassard. "You on survey?"

The thick muscles under Blaise's shirt tightened at the insolence of the other's manner. But his seamed face might have been carved from wood. "Ah-hah!" he said, easing a cloud of smoke from his mouth.

"My name is Joe Flambeau. I work for Jules Isadore!" announced the caller. "What your name?"

"I am Big Windigo from Devil Valley! I eat Nottaway Riviere man for supper!" The twinkle faded to a cold stare.

At the calculated affront the other sucked in his breath. "By gar! You ensult Joe Flambeau!" he choked. Then Flambeau's groping fingers found and closed on the bone handle of the knife under his coat. "Don't pull dat knife!" Brassard's voice was as brittle as shell ice. "Look behin' you!" he said.

Flambeau turned his head. Feet bunched under him, the big air-dale crouched like a panther. "You pull dat knife and dat dog land on your back and rip your t'roat!"

Flambeau's hand moved away from his knife handle. "I don't come here for troubl!" he said weakly. "I talk business wid you."

"Forget w'at I say!" appeased Blaise. "I don't mean nothin'. W'at you want, Flambeau?"

"W'y you take Nottaway Trail to de Bay?"

"We survey lower riviere." Flambeau surprised Blaise with: "Dese engineer pay you small wages. I get you job wid big money."

"Who wid?"

"Isadore! You are stout man. Isadore pay big money for strong man on de riviere."

It was growing interesting. Blaise took the bait. "Ah-hah! W'at you say?"

"Double w'at you get! Leave dose men and dey will not make survey alone."

Blaise threw back his head and laughed. "You notice dat redhead?"

"Ah-hah!"

"He is Injun in white water! Finlay will run anyting. Dey go to de bay widout me."

Flambeau scowled. "Batoche will talk wid you at daylight, here."

"Ah-hah!"

"Isadore give you big pay. Shake hand!"

Blaise rose and extended a thick paw. Then he deliberately tossed his bombshell. "W'y do Isadore watch de Nottaway like a fox watch a rabbit run? He strike gold on Waswanipi?"

Flambeau's jaw sagged as he stared at the cryptic face of the speaker. "Mebbe he got gold! Mebbe! You come wid us and fin' out! I see you at daylight."

Shortly Finlay and Malone joined Blaise at the camp on the shore.

"This dump is sure stumped!" snorted the giant, filling and lighting his pipe. "Can't get a soul to talk! From the way they shut up you'd think the bush north of here was full of cockeyed, man-eating Windigo!"

"Who'd you talk with?" asked Finlay.

"Cotter the storekeeper's as scared as a fox in deep snow with a lynx on his trail. The rest are the same way. You see McLeod?"

"Yes. I showed him the last line of the letter sent to the family and asked if he recognized the writing. By the look in his wife's face I believe he wrote it himself."

"Let's see that letter, again, Garry! When Cotter asked me to register, I saw in his book some writing on a loose sheet signed by McLeod."

Finlay handed Malone the letter he carried in his wallet and the latter read aloud:

"To the family of Robert Finlay, North Bay, Ontario:

"Last spring Robert Finlay and his partner, Andrew Troup, left Nottaway bound for the Chibougamau gold country by way of the Waswanipi River. In the fall it was reported, here, that Montagnais Indians had found their smashed canoe. This is the third party that has disappeared on the Chibougamau Trail in two years. There are people who have reasons why they don't want prospectors traveling Waswanipi water."

"I don't believe these six men were drowned."

"A Friend."

For some time Malone studied the letter. "Yes, it looks mighty like that writing of McLeod's I saw in Cotter's book," he said.

"McLeod wrote that letter, Red." Finlay repeated his conversation with the station agent and his wife.

"But McLeod's tied up here and doesn't want trouble," he concluded. "Now whom does he suspect and why?"

"Do you suppose someone's made a pacer strike on the river and is trying to hog it?"

Finlay receives an anonymous letter suggesting that the six men were not drowned as reported. Finlay and Malone find the people of the Nottaway settlement strangely averse to discussing the tragedy. Among themselves they question the reports from the north that the bodies of the men were found by Indians. The name of Isadore, rich fur man, when brought by Finlay, causes an immediate cessation of further conversation along that line.

"It's mighty good of you, Mrs. MacDonald, to warn us," Finlay said, "but we happen to be government surveyors under orders—not prospectors. No one's going to be crazy enough to monkey with a survey party."

"I know, but Mrs. McLeod said tonight that one of those boys lost last year was your brother—that you were making inquiries."

So it was all over the place? He had talked too much to the McLeods. And yet it had been necessary to learn who wrote that letter.

"Mrs. MacDonald," Finlay suddenly asked, "who is it you're afraid of—Isadore?"

Finlay heard the sudden intake of her breath. "Oh, no! You're wrong there! We don't even know him! He's a fur man and generally flies to Waswanipi from down below."

"Well, anyway, I'm grateful for your kindness. But as our job is to re-map the lower Nottaway I don't expect to have the pleasure of meeting Mr. Isadore. Good night!"

In the small bedroom at Cotter's Finlay found Malone and told him the story.

"Don't think we're surveyors, eh? Want to warn us off the Chibougamau Trail! Looks more and more, chief, as if that letter was right!"

"Yes, Red, that letter was right!"

"They've been through our bags," whispered Malone.

Shortly Red Malone was filling the room with gargantuan snores but Garry Finlay could not sleep. Later he heard the cautious tread of moccasined feet on the creaking stairway and someone entered the room adjoining. There was whispered conversation, that was inaudible, then, head against the partition of matched boards, he heard:

"Oua! Dey sleep soun'! Leesten!"

"Ah-hah! Dey sleep hard!" one whispered.

There was the creak of bed springs and a grunt of disgust.

"Dat faller who look like hawk wid his eye say he make map of de Nottaway. He lie. Dey take de Chibougamau Trail."

"Dey carry tool and map of engineer."

"Mebbe so. But I t'ink dey lie."

"Chibougamau! You t'ink dey hunt for gold, eh? We offair dis Brassard big pay in de mornin' and get him drunk. Den we find out who dey are." There was a muffled chuckle. "If dey go to Waswanipi, Tete-Blanche show dem w'ere to find gold and bury dem in de hole."

Shortly the men in the next room slept, but Garry Finlay's brain was busy. Tete-Blanche! He's white-haired! And Tetu! What a pair of names! He'd not forget them. So these were the men who were blocking the Chibougamau Trail?

CHAPTER II

Before daylight Finlay heard the two men in the next room creep down the stairs. He waked Malone, told him what he had overheard and, later, found Cotter in the store.

"Much travel through here?" he threw out, casually.

"There's a couple of free traders south of here and all the Hudson's Bay and Isadore supplies go this way."

"Many hit for Chibougamau from here?"

"A few tried it but were drowned."

"What?"

"Yes, drowned in the Waswanipi! It's nasty water. Even the Indians are shy of it."

The muscles in Finlay's face suddenly tightened. Cotter slowly colored before the thrust of the agate eyes. "How do you know they were drowned?"

"Isadore says so."

"Oh, Isadore says so? Say, Cotter, where did this Isadore come from? How long has he been trading on Waswanipi Lake?"

The storekeeper was visibly uneasy. "He was here before the steel went through—before the Chibougamau gold strike."

"Don't know where he came from?"

Cotter's hand was noticeably unsteady as he filled his pipe. "Say, ain't you pretty curious? I thought you was a government surveyor but you talk like the police."

Garry smiled at the other's evident nervousness. Then he suddenly shot the bald question: "How long has Tete-Blanche been working for him?"

Cotter's face was etched with fear. "I'm making it my business, Mr. Cotter! Finlay said! You're scared silly! What are you afraid of?"

Cotter swallowed hard. "You're right! I am scared! I bin threatened. I'm trying to make a livin' here—tryin' to mind my own business. You can't blame me for keepin' my mouth shut!"

"Good!" thought Garry. "Now I'm getting somewhere! This fellow's going to talk!" Then he asked the uneasy man behind the counter: "Just what are you scared of?"

"Scared of being burned out at night in midwinter—scared of what might happen to my family!"

"I can't tell you! I'm afraid to talk."

quarters to map Waswanipi. Will that be news?"

Finlay rose. "I'm dropping in on those prospectors above here," he said, and left his friends.

"Hello, Mac!" greeted a voice as Finlay reached the tent above the bridge. "Sit down and light up!"

"Thanks, I will. Where you people heading?"

"Rouyn way! Plenty gold in them quartz veins if you can locate 'em!" said a grizzled veteran. "You're on the survey, they tell me."

"Yes, we pull out in the morning for Matagami."

"Well, you're on government business. That makes you safe. But, friend, if you was prospectin', I'd advise you to wet them paddles of yourn south of the steel."

"How's that?"

"Too many men who left here for Chibougamau ain't never been heard from."

Finlay finished his pipe and bade the prospectors good night. On his way back to Cotter's store he passed a lighted shack. From the shadows in the rear came a woman's voice: "Mr. Finlay!"

Finlay stopped. "Did somebody call me?" he asked.

"I'm Mrs. MacDonald," said the invisible speaker in a low tone. "You'll think it's strange for me to speak to you this way. But my husband, the section foreman, is down the line and I've got to talk."

"What is it, Mrs. MacDonald?" said the interested Finlay.

"You're going down river—on the survey?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Finlay, they don't believe you're on the survey. If you're headed for the Chibougamau Trail, I beg you to give it up!"

"This is interesting. Who doesn't believe we're a survey party?"

"I can't tell you! I'm afraid to talk. It's too dangerous."

"Just what are they afraid of? Why don't they talk to the police?"

"The police were here last year, the Provincials. They only laughed at us."

Finlay was both annoyed and interested. Annoyed that a government survey party should be suspected of being something else.

PAUL PREACHES FAITH IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Romans 3:21-31; 5:1, 2.
GOLDEN TEXT—As it is written, The just shall live by faith.—Romans 1:17.

Justification by faith is a doctrine which lies at the very heart of the gospel. It provides the answer to man's age-old question, "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts 16:30).

"This was a question with which Paul had himself grappled, and for years he had sought salvation in the traditional Jewish way. Then one day he met Christ and he underwent a spiritual transformation through faith in Him, apart from the works of the law. Because of that experience, and because of the divine revelations made to him, he was able to show others how to be saved and how to live a life of victory. Among the writers of the New Testament it is Paul who most clearly sets forth the doctrine of justification by faith, a doctrine which has brought comfort of soul to multitudes, and the consciousness of sins forgiven." (Olmstead).

I. How Can God Be Just and Justify Sinners? (Rom. 3:21-31).

The portion of Romans just preceding our lesson is devoted to a devastating treatment of man's sinfulness, bringing him face to face with the question, "What can I do about it?" The answer has a hopeless ring to it.

1. Man has no righteousness of his own, and cannot by any of his own works save himself. "He has tried many ways, in every age, but no human being, or groups of men or women, have ever devised any scheme, have ever conceived of any ritual, have ever established any religion by their own efforts, through which peace with God has been found and a sinner has been enabled to stand before a holy God without condemnation. Man being helpless, God now intervenes" (Wilbur M. Smith).

2. Christ paid the penalty for man's sin by His own blood. How clearly verse 25 declares the sacrificial death of Christ to provide a covering of blood (the real meaning of "propitiation") which will enable a just God to forgive the sinner that believes in Christ (v. 22). Why not receive it in all its grace and power, not trying to explain it away or to evade its requirements? Why attempt to provide some other means of salvation when we know that "without the shedding of blood is no remission" of sin (Heb. 9:22)?

3. Man receives salvation by grace through faith, apart from works. Man can only be "justified freely by his grace" (v. 24). It is for "them that believe" (v. 22), it is "through faith" (vv. 25, 26) and, note with care, "man is justified by faith apart from the works of the law" (v. 28). Thus God establishes the law (v. 31) and yet becomes the righteous justifier of a repentant believing sinner.

II. What Happens When a Man Is Justified? (Rom. 5:1, 2).

These verses sound like the uplifting music of a mighty organ, with the celestial choirs joining in to sing. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have"—What? Oh many precious possessions, three of which are here mentioned.

1. "Peace With God."

"Through our Lord Jesus Christ" the barrier of sin with all its malicious enmity has been broken down and the believer is at peace with God. What could be more wonderful than this to be really "in tune with the Infinite"? That is something, by the way, which can only be true of the believer, one who has both peace with God and the peace of God flooding his soul. Every sinner who covets that experience may have it—now—by faith in Christ.

2. Standing in Grace.

"To stand in grace is to occupy the position wherein love is able to carry out its desires. To stand in grace is to come into such relationship with the Lord that He may do that thing that is in His heart, the thing which His love prompts. To stand in favor is to be unafraid. It is to be able to pass into the presence of One of whom we are unafraid, and know that there will be welcome. It is to know that to come into the presence of this One is to receive, not necessarily a gift, but love, and of Himself, in a communion which is unbroken and perfect" (G. Campbell Morgan).

3. Rejoicing in Hope.

The world is sorrowful for it has lost hope, but the believer rejoices "in hope of the glory of God" (v. 2). The Christian has the forward look. His future is as bright as the promises of God. He knows that he will one day see the glory of God revealed in all His holiness, power, love and grace. Even now the believer has that hope in his heart, and lives a rejoicing life (or should do so). It's a great thing to be saved!

Doughnut Stones

Doughnut stones are perforated ring-like stone objects of prehistoric significance. They are found on the sites of early Indian settlements throughout North America, particularly in southern California, where many have been unearthed from ancient burial plots.

It is believed that the Indians slipped these stones over heavy sticks for use as hammers, weapons, or as weights for digging implements.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

The Daily Vacation Bible School which has been in session for the past three weeks closed Sunday evening with a demonstration of the work done by the pupils during the period. The session was held in the Methodist church which sponsored the school.

The Service set forth the nature of the work of the School including memory work, note book work, and Biblical stories and also character stories having to do with the central theme of the School which this year was "The Rules of the Game."

The scholars have enjoyed the School and took a good deal of interest in their work. Each pupil wore a cap suitable for the occasion and with the letters DVBS placed thereon which gave a pleasing appearance to the program.

MOKENA

Mr. Leslie Clark received word Monday of the sudden death of his only sister in her home in San Deigo, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Warning and son Lee, Miss Christina Schmidt, Mrs. Herman Biefeldt and John Schmidt of Joliet attended the 60th Wedding Anniversary on July 24th of their Uncle and Aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schmidt of Randolph, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt are prominent residents of Randolph and resided at Tinley Park many years ago. Mrs. Schmidt is 81 years old and Mr. Schmidt is 88. Both are enjoying good health.

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes Nebeker and Miss Dorothy Hall have returned from a delightful vacation spent in Wisconsin.

The Mokena Boy Scouts got a real work-out recently when they made a 17-mile hike with Robert Geuther to Lake Sauk Trail near Chicago Heights. The boys enjoyed the experience very much.

Cooper and Hostert have had their garage painted and have made quite extensive repairs on their old garage building now used as a store house for state highway equipment.

Herman Scheweiser was called to Bristol, Illinois Monday on a road construction job, delivering a road roller.

The annual chicken dinner and picnic of St. Mary's parish of Mokena held Sunday was very largely attended and was a big success.

Authorized Sales & Service, Chevy Let Parts, Factory Trained Mechanics, Tires, Radios, Accessories.
12742 S. WESTERN AVE. Blue Island, Ill. Phone 2370

This popular Automobile establishment located in Blue Island carries the ever popular CHEVROLET car. They have a complete line of new cars which afford greater quality than before. The public has recognized that CHEVROLET represents a high standard of quality at low cost. The CHEVROLET models on the market today embody a high quality of material and workmanship such as one expects in much higher priced cars. There are many new mechanical features on the 1941 CHEVROLET which promote comfort—speed and safety. Let the WITTE BROS. MOTOR SALES in Blue Island demonstrate this up-to-date inexpensive and beautiful car to you.

The WITTE BROS. MOTOR SALES has a used car department and has on display bargains in used and reconditioned cars. Here the wise buyer can find thousands of miles of trouble free and satisfactory motoring at a fraction of the original cost.

With the current business increase and the general upturn of business many people are being forced by necessity to do what wisdom often advises, that is purchase a second hand car instead of a new one. With a new car there is all the bother of breaking in for the first thousand miles, very often the same car driven a few thousand miles and thoroughly broken in and seasoned, actually is no better driving condition than when it was new, and can be bought for a fraction of its original cost. They have many such bargains at the Witte Motor Sales, and if you are considering buying either a new or used car we would advise you to visit them first.

We are glad to compliment and recommend The Witte Motor Sales upon the reliable position they hold in the life of this community and to assure the public the best in service and value when dealing with them.

NEW LENOX

By DOLORES ANDERSON

Miss Ruth Louise Sayers, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Sayers, became the bride of Raymond Lenz, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lenz, of Oak Forest at a 7 o'clock candle-light ceremony performed Saturday evening in the Methodist church by Rev. Benjamin Aman. The altar at which the vows were read, was beautifully decorated with baskets of summer flowers, made up of delphinium, lilies, roses and gladiolus blossoms.

The bride wore a white street length silk jersey dress, with matching white turban and white accessories. In her corsage were red roses and white baby breath. Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Paul Pence, sister of the bridegroom, who wore a pink crepe street length dress with white accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

Attending Mr. Lenz was his brother in law, Mr. Pence.

While the candles were being lighted by Stewart Ayres, nephew of the bride, Mrs. Howard Ayres, sister of the bride, played Love Dreams.

Judith Ann Novak, niece of the bride, was flower girl. During the ceremony, Mrs. Benjamin Aman sang "I Love You Truly" and "Oh Promise Me", accompanied by Mrs. Ayres at the piano.

Following the wedding a reception for the bride party and immediate families was held in the home of the brides mother, Mrs. Robt. Watkins, Miss Gladys Watkins and Mrs. Bessie Reed, assisted in serving. Mrs. Sayers wore a green & white triple sheer redingote dress, and wore a corsage of white roses. At the ROXY...

"A Woman's Face", the brazen truth about a girl who became bitterly notorious when life cheated her of love and beauty, upholding the superb performances of Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas and Conrad Veidt, coming to the Roxy Theatre at Lockport, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

Her face was distorted and scarred, yet this woman won the kisses and embraces of two men. She was the scar-faced she-devil in the eyes of every man, but they still made love to this cruellest woman on the continent. Since childhood a severe burn left her face scarred and she was always shunned because of her repulsive appearance. She operates a small cafe as a blind for her blackmail racket, and her hand is trumped as she attempted to blackmail the wife of a famed plastic surgeon, who is untrue to her husband. The surgeon becomes interested in her case, and he restores her face to its natural beauty, as they meet by some twist of fate. The story surges through a fast and exciting cavalcade of circumstances, coming to a roaring climax.

Wednesday and Thursday, the Roxy will feature a twin-billing of "There's Magic in Music" with Allan Jones, Jones, Margaret Lindsay, and Lynne Overman, plus "The People vs. Dr. Kildare", the story of medical science against public opinion, with Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore.

"The Bad Man", with Wallace Berry and Linoel Barrymore, and "Too Many Blondes" with Rudy Vallee and Helen Parrish, will be the featured double billing at the Roxy, this Friday and Saturday.

JOSEPH MAIER'S BAKERY

12948 S. Western, Blue Island, Phone 3410. Birthday, Wedding Anniversary Cakes.

Since our earliest known era, bread has been an important part of human food and in recent years physicians have endorsed it as a food of extreme value because of the high content of protein and carbohydrates which it possesses. Both of these elements are essential to the health and well being of the human body and both are obtained from wheat.

Jos. Maier's Bake Shop has kept pace with the baking business in both equipment and methods. The managers and owners make every effort to supply their customers with a product made under the most sanitary conditions possible. Their bread is made from the best and richest of flour, shortening and other ingredients and contains a high content of milk. The bakers are also experts in the production of light rolls, of all kinds, which are baked daily, and are distinctive in both quality and taste. They carefully maintain the high standard of their products regardless of cost of materials.

Joseph Maier's Bakery is always open to public inspection. Their business success can be traced directly to the reputation their products enjoy with the public. If you are not already a confirmed user of their baking, a trial will convince you of its high quality. We recommend the Joseph Maier Bakery to all of our readers for satisfaction when you need a good pie or cake.

LET'S HAVE AN ICE CREAM SOCIAL!
(See Recipes Below)

ICE CREAM 'N CAKE

Shining in their starched dresses, the girls are ready "to recite their pieces," the boys, slicked and combed, are watching them shyly, and everyone's waiting for refreshment time to come. Of course, it's an ice cream social, that typically American festival to which homemakers bring their most delectable cakes and choicest ice cream. There, too, you'll find lemonade, "made in the shade by the old maid."

There was a time when an ice cream social, though as pleasant an affair as you'd find on the summer calendar, carried with it a great deal of careful preparation. Ice cream had to be kept in heavy containers which in turn were wrapped in blankets, and if the speeches and program lasted too long it was apt to be more melted than icy when you were finally served. But no longer do you have such a risk. The ice cream can be stored in your refrigerator and it will be kept really hard.

Making ice cream with the freezer method is fun, and usually the whole family gets together to do some of the cranking. The freezer has a wooden or metal bucket holding the ice and salt and a non-rusting metal container with a closely fitting cover for holding the mixture to be frozen. The mixture is stirred by a paddle attached to the crank which is operated by hand, and sometimes by a small electric motor.

Use three parts of ice to one part of salt. Turn the crank slowly at first for about five minutes or until the mixture stiffens, then as quickly as possible until it is difficult to turn. This takes about six minutes. Add more ice and salt if necessary. Pour off salt water, push down ice and salt being careful to get none in the can of ice cream.

Wipe top of can, uncover, take out the paddle, and beat the frozen mixture with a wooden spoon. Cover can with wax paper, and pack again. Let stand several hours to ripen.

If you would be famous for your ice creams and have them spoken of well at the social, follow directions to get the desirable smooth, creamy triumphs. Ice cream free from crystals and splinters will get first prize every time.

*Vanilla Ice Cream.

(Makes 1½ quarts)

- 1½ cups sweetened condensed milk (15-oz. can)
- 2 cups thin cream
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 tablespoon vanilla

Blend thoroughly the sweetened condensed milk, thin cream, cold water and vanilla. Freeze in one-quart freezer. Remove dasher. Pack in ice and salt for one hour or more after freezing.

For Banana Ice Cream, use the above recipe, except to substitute 1 teaspoon of lemon extract in place of vanilla. Mash three bananas to a smooth pulp with a silver fork and add to ice cream after removing dasher.

Coffee Ice Cream: Proceed as for Vanilla Ice Cream, using 1 cup of cold black coffee in place of 1 cup of water and ½ teaspoon vanilla in place of 1 tablespoon of vanilla.

Maple Nut Ice Cream: One of the most requested flavors, made just like the vanilla except maple flavoring is substituted for vanilla, and ½ cup of chopped nuts is added just after removing the dasher.

If you like chocolate flavoring, here's a recipe I'm sure will please you. Rich and creamy, full of satisfying chocolate flavoring, it's one kind of ice cream of which there can never be too much made.

*Chocolate Ice Cream.

- 4 eggs separated
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 pint cream, whipped
- 1½ ounces chocolate

Mix cornstarch and sugar. Stir into well beaten yolks. Mix and blend with milk, heat in double boiler, and cook until thick. Add chocolate and cook till blended. Cool, fold in beaten egg whites and whipped cream. Freeze.

Among the pleasant surprises in appearance and in flavor among ice creams is this one called Tutti-Frutti. If you're longing for a change from familiar favorites this one leaves nothing to be desired. To make it really gala for the youngsters, take a scoop of it, pop two raisins in for the eyes, a currant for the nose and a cherry for the mouth. It's a simple gesture but one which they'll appreciate for all it's worth.

Tutti Frutti Ice Cream.

(Serves 6)

- ¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
- ½ cup water
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 1 cup whipping cream
- ¼ cup finely chopped maraschino cherries
- ¼ cup seeded raisins, finely chopped

Mix sweetened condensed milk, water and vanilla. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency. Fold into chilled mixture. Freeze in freezing unit of refrigerator till half frozen. Scrape from tray, beat until smooth but not melted. Add chopped fruit. Replace in freezing unit until frozen.

No social is completely a success without an array of freshly baked, nice smelling cakes with their swirls of frosting piled high to tempt. One cake which will really give you a new high in reputation is this Walnut Torte, an old-fashioned favorite with new found fame.

*Walnut Torte.

- 1 cup zweiback crumbs
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 4 eggs separated
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ pint cream, whipped

Crush the zweiback crumbs, mix with baking powder and nuts. Beat egg yolks thick and lemon color, beat in sugar, and then gradually, the crumb nut mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into two greased and floured tins and bake in a moderate (375 degrees) oven 10 to 15 minutes. When mixture is light to touch and pulls from sides of pan it's done. Cool thoroughly. Put layers together with whipped cream and garnish with whole walnuts.

Social Troubles Often Cause of Digestive Ills

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE records show that of every 100 patients who consult physicians, more than 50 per cent have no organic trouble, their symptoms being due in many cases to emotional disturbances.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

In fact, Dr. C. F. Martin, formerly dean of McGill Medical school, Montreal, and a specialist in diseases of the stomach and intestines, stated a few years ago that "Every patient who consults a physician is a 'mental' patient," aside from whether he has any organic disease or not. This means, then, that every patient must be treated from the mental standpoint also if he is to receive help from the physician.

Now, we are all familiar with cases where shock, worry, anxiety, or other emotional disturbance has caused mental symptoms in that the individual acts queerly, partially loses his memory, and may suspect members of his family or his friends of plotting against him. But what we are apt to forget is that these emotional disturbances can affect the workings of the body, and "apparently" not disturb the mind to any extent. It is interesting, therefore, to read of the experience of another specialist in stomach and intestinal diseases, Dr. G. Canby Robinson, Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, in The Bulletin, Johns Hopkins Hospital.

"In order to illustrate the fact that social disturbances cause illness," the report said, "we studied 50 patients with digestive disorders, admitted in rotation and studied without selection in the gastro (stomach) intestinal clinic of Johns Hopkins hospital. Patients with digestive disorders (indigestion) were, we knew, frequently ill because of emotional disturbances, but we were not prepared to find, as we did, that adverse social conditions were entirely or importantly related as a cause of illness in 44 of the 50 patients (88 per cent). In 30 patients no organic disease could be discovered."

Now the fact that nervousness and emotional disturbances are the only cause of many cases of indigestion (as they are of heart and other symptoms) and have an aggravating effect when real trouble exists, does not mean that symptoms of indigestion should not be investigated.

Treatment of Trifacial Neuralgia

TRIFACIAL neuralgia—tic dolo-reux—is a painful condition which comes on suddenly, lasts for hours and days sometimes, then suddenly disappears. The pain is on one side of face and is almost unbearable.

The treatment in former years was surgery and in some cases today surgery is necessary to rid the patient of this terrible pain.

Fortunately, it was found that the injection of alcohol into the main root or nerve bundle supplying the whole side of the face would stop the pain for months in some cases, years in others, and apparently permanent relief is obtained by some patients.

The effectiveness of this alcohol injection is recorded by Dr. W. Harris, London, in Brain, a British medical journal devoted to the brain and its disturbances.

Dr. Harris has treated within 30 years 2,500 persons suffering from this ailment (1,056 in private practice) by injection of alcohol. He has notes on only 377 of the hospital patients. Of the 1,433 patients 943 were women and 490 were men. The ages in majority of cases were between 41 and 70.

The cause of tic dolo-reux, in the opinion of Dr. Harris, is infected teeth, infected gums, abscess and infection of the sinuses. Letters written to the patients who could be reached revealed that the majority of those who reported had been free of pain for from three to thirty-one years. Some reported that there was still numbness on the one side and others that partial loss of taste occurred on the affected side. In some cases complete loss of taste on affected side occurred. A few reported that a few weeks after injection a new type of pain appeared.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes me to belch after eating?

A.—Many cases of belching are due to a "nervous" stomach and many due to a sluggish liver.

Q.—What are the symptoms of syphilis? Is it curable?

A.—Symptoms would depend upon whether disease is in first, second or third stage. Test of blood or spinal fluid shows definitely if syphilis is or is not present. Syphilis is curable under proper treatment.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT ALL started with a bright idea for making a simple, painted coffee table from odds and ends of lumber. The sketch at the lower left gives the dimensions. The two end sections were made first; the top and sides of these being screwed together with 1-inch metal angles. A shelf was then nailed in and a ½ by 3-inch board nailed across the back of it. Two boards for the top of the table were then screwed to the end sections.

Now the needle-lady comes in. The table was to be painted putty color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and applied a design of bright blue and red morning glories and green leaves on it with stems and tendrils in green outline stitch. This was placed over the table top and tacked around the edge. A piece of window glass was then cut to fit and ½ by 3-inch pieces were screwed to the sides.

NOTE: This graceful morning glory design is so attractive that Mrs. Spears has arranged to furnish transfer patterns to be used in stamping fabric for a table
